DELPHINIUMS

Fertilize with commercial fertilizer as animal fertilizers have been found to promote crown rot. Use plenty of coarse sand in soil as delphiniums need good drainage. In the fall cut spikes to the ground and put a trowel of fine charcoal and a couple of trowels of sand on the crowns. Cut stalks clear to ground after first blooming and they will bloom again.

Bacterial Leaf Spot may be controlled by drenching soil about plants with Bordeaux several times during the season. Crown Rot is controlled with corrosive sublimate solution. If very severe, plants should be destroyed and the soil sterilized. Mildew, aphids, and red spider are controlled with dusting sulphur and Rotene or Garden Guard.

English Hybrids - Blackmore & Langdon. A fine development. Enormous flowers in blue, mauve, and pink. Solid, erect spikes, very tall (4-5'). Fine for cut flowers. Long season of blooms.

ROSES

Culture of roses differ materially from most decorative plants. Good soil, not too rich, an abundance of water, but good drainage and regular feeding. Cow manure is best but commercial fertilizers are good if used in connection with some kind of compost. Spring planting is best; cut back sharply, about two-thirds, at planting time. Apply dusting sulphur frequently to protect roses against disease. Garden Guard or Aphis spray is good to destroy aphids. Nine parts dusting sulphur and one part arsenate of lead is excellent for "black spot". All of our roses are No. 1 stock and well-rooted. Most varieties will bloom freely this year.
